

Dear Friends,

Driving to the office the other day, I was reminded that it's road construction season in Colorado. The Board's announcement of my retirement may prompt us to think it's transition season in WorldVenture too! Transitions, guided by our Sovereign God, are good and necessary for the people impacted and for our mission.

For some time now, Christine and I have sensed change was coming in my role at WorldVenture. The idea of a transition window is something I have discussed with the GO Team and with the Executive Committee of the Board. With the recommendations of the DNA and Sustainability teams for implementations in and across WorldVenture, I believe strongly that the next President needs to be significantly involved in the implementations rather than inherit core decisions. At least, I would and so I assume the next President will as well.

I am deeply content in Christ that God is orchestrating the transitions in WorldVenture, including my own. I anticipate great things for WorldVenture as we pursue His leading together! I am personally reminded that “...surrender [to Jesus] isn't a single decision—it's a lifestyle. Surrender isn't loss; it's freedom.” (Living the Yes, Bobby Cox)

In Christ,

Jeff Denlinger
President, WorldVenture
